Palace: No to mining ban

Foreign owners to stay; industry still government's priority

By GFC Cabaquero Jr.

SAYING A BAN WAS NOT the answer, Malacañang yesterday stood firm on its policy allowing big foreign companies to operate mines despite recommendations to stop Australian mining activities on Rapu-Rapu Island and review the country's liberalized mining law.

"Our country is blessed as one of the most highly mineralized countries in the world. It would be a disservice to our people if our rich natural potential is not realized as this is clearly a source of employment and development," Press Secretary Ignacio Buaya said in a statement.

"What on mining is not the answer but the standards and safeguards already in place and existing laws must be strictly enforced. Mining remains a priority for development," Buaya stressed.

Buaya issued the statement after the Malacañang Council—Rapu-Rapu Interfacing Commission submitted to President Macapagal-Arroyo on Friday report recommending the scrapping of the environmental compliance certificate issued to the Australian Lakeland Group and calling for a moratorium on mining on the 5,000-hectare island of Rapu-Rapu to Aklan.

It also called for a review of the mining law, especially its provisions on foreign ownership and management of mining companies and operations.

The commission launched an inquiry following mine tailings spills on Rapu-Rapu.

Presidential adviser on political affairs Gabriel Claudio said in a radio interview that the commission might have overstepped its bounds when it recommended wholesale changes in the law.

"This is not a matter of whether the mining law should be amended or repealed. We will be guided by Congress."

Daughter of 1st Sherpa on Everest married Pinoy

By Jo Zamora

The Sherpa's young daughter Nina had given him the blue poks, and he dug a hole in the snow and buried it along with a few biscuits and chocolate as gifts to the mountain, while Hillary placed the British flag.

This is among the memories of her father that Nina, widow of the Filipino graphic artist and book designer Francisco "Ned" Galang, treasures.

She was in grade school at the time. "I just gave him the poks. I meant them well. If you go up in the mts, here, bring this," she said, chuckling.

Herself a mountaineer in her youth, Nina, now 62, expressed elation that three Filipinos had reached the summit of Everest, duplicating her father's late 53 years ago.

"This is a great achievement. My congratulations to the mountaineers and to the Filipino people," she said by tele phone from Singapore, where she now lives with her son Fabian.

Nina said her father was "among the pioneers who opened the routes that these mountaineers now follow."

Fr. Reuter: Honorary Pinoy still dreams at 90

By Christian V. Esguerra

JEFFREY FREST JR. JAMES R. REUTER turns 90 years old today and shows no signs of slowing down.

"I don't believe in retiring," the New Jersey native and honorary Filipino said the day before in an interview on Friday.

Arguably the only clergymen who really knows and understands media culture in the Philippines, Reuter remains relatively fit, if not for a long-running heart condition that has limited his movements and has forced him to use a cane.

Arthritis has also kept him from indulging in some of his favorite activities—swimming and jogging.

Hard to believe, but every day since 1956, he used to walk the entire three-kilometer stretch of Ruffo Circle, starting from St. Paul College where he would say Mass, all the way to Xavier House in Sta. Ana, Manila where he lives and holds office.

"You know for this, this is my street. If I didn't appear, people in the neighborhood would wonder," Reuter says.

But two years ago, he had to stop his three-kilometer walks and has since found consolation in daily 15-minute exercises on his stationary bike.

Other than health conditions brought on by natural aging, Reuter is very much the same man who lived in the Philippines since 1958. It's filled with admiration, clarity of thought and artistic sensibility.

He has had no heart attacks, no strokes. He went under the knife six times due to a hernia and broke his nose three times because of football and basketball. Suffice it to say, he is as durable as a Navy SEAL or even a Gladiator.

Reuter, who has made a mark in radio, television and theater, still has big plans for the Catholic Church's National Office of Mass Media, which he has headed since 1966.

He remains optimistic that Filipinos—often maligned elsewhere for their poverty and politics—would eventually be understood, appreciated and respected.

"We will rise," he says. "Others think we are low simply because we have no money. But it's not the only criteria. We invest in life and love and they are far more important."

Reuter has much credibility when it comes to resilience and showcasing Filipino grace that carries the faith through.

Four years ago while attending the golden jubilee of his former students at Ateneo de Naga's Class of 1952, he engaged local crowd over his life and offered his lungs. His breathers went down to 30.

WHEN TO RETIRE? Don't, advises Fr. James Reuter SJ, as you go into decline.

Turning 90 today, he's lived and worked among the Filipinos since 1952.

Doc Ted: RP's unsung hero on Mt. Everest

By Alvin Papa

PHILIPINOS ARE A BIG HIT AT MOUNT EVEREST's Base Camp not only for the 1-2-3 finish of those of their own but also for showing international expeditions what greatness is all about.

According to First Philippine Mt. Everest Expedition team leader Armino Valdez, UPMGE physician Ted Esguerra is probably the most popular person at the camp, which is situated 5,400 meters (17,700 feet) up the mountain.

Esguerra, a member of the Philippine Coast Guard and an expert in search and rescue, has been treating his free mountaineers afflicted with acute mountain sickness (AMS), as well as minor digestive and respiratory ailments.

Normally, a visit to a commercial "clinic" at Base Camp would cost a dollar $75.

"Last summer here, with Dr. Ted around, we had no impact on children from all over the world. He has been treating mountaineers who are suffering from AMS. It really shows the Filipino spirit and values," Valdez said in a satellite phone call to the Inquirer.

Among Esguerra's recent patients were locals, Belgian and South African.

'Make communism illegal again'

By Roberto Ordoña, PMA General Secretary, and Norman Borlindarsen, Manila

CLARK SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE—ARMY Maj. Gen. Joaquin Palparan suggested yesterday a new law be passed outlawing the Communist Party of the Philippines and sympathetic organizations, saying their influence had grown in recent years and that repealing the old anti-Communist law was a mistake.

The commander of the Philippine Army's 7th Infantry Division, Clark Special Economic Zone, said the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and its affiliates have been "very active" in the zone, and that the zone's security is being threatened by the presence of communist troops.

Asked if he thought the repeal of Republic Act No. 1755, or the old, citing the military's slogan, of a "total ban" on the CPP-NPA, party-line organizations and its supporters, he said the CPP-NPA, party-line organizations and its supporters are still active in the zone.

"They have to be made to understand that if we really are in a hurry for them to go back to their hills," Palparan said.

"I would be happy if communist parties would be outlawed again," said Palparan, a self-proclaimed leftist leader, who said he had been in the zone for 10 years, and that he had been in the zone for 10 years.

OIC calls for Misuari's release in aid of talks

MANILA—THE ORGANIZATION OF THE FREE PRESS (OFP) yesterday called for the release of jailed Mindanao rebel leader Abu Basma to help progress of the peace talks in Manila.

Misuari, jailed for a charge of rebellion in 2001, is necessary for the peace talks to progress, said lawyer Ramon S. Alayon, who is the OIC's secretary and head of the OIC's delegation to Manila.

"We are appealing to the government of the Philippines to release Misuari. He is a key figure in the peace talks and his release is necessary for the peace talks to progress," said Alayon.

But he stressed that the OIC would not release Misuari if he is not released in the aid of the peace talks.

Signatures in Capiz, Gensan verified, says Sigaw ng Bayan

By Marimar Bonifacio and Jerome Asing

A GROUP PLAYING FOR CHARTER CHANGE via a people's initiative yesterday claimed that the Commission on Elections had verified the necessary signatures in the province of Capiz and Gensan.

The voters in these two places have stopped the verification of signatures by local COMELEC officials but lawyer Ramon Lantion said signatures representing their petition of registered voters in these areas had already been verified prior to the elections.

Before the constitution, a successful people's initiative for constitutional amendment must be concerned by, through signatures, by 12 percent of registered voters nationwide and three percent of registered voters in each of the provinces that 200 legislative districts.

"In most and sometime, we'll be ready to file a petition before the COMELEC and bring before it thousands of verified signatures this coming week," said Lantion, leader of the people's initiative group Sigaw ng Bayan.

Lantion said they were informed that the COMELEC had verified the signatures of at least three percent of the registered voters in Capiz as early as April 15, and those in Gensan as early as April 20.

The voters stopped the verification in Capiz in late April and in Gensan in late May in May, he said.

Sigaw ng Bayan had earlier claimed that the signatures in support of the people's initiative had already been verified by local COMELEC officials in 90 percent of the country's 200 legislative districts.

But the COMELEC said it could not confirm the claims by Sigaw ng Bayan.

"It's improper for us to say that. It's their obligation to verify the signatures," COMELEC spokesperson James Arroyo Jr. said in a phone interview.

Arroyo explained that the local election officials also verify the number of the signatures presented in them to the district level.

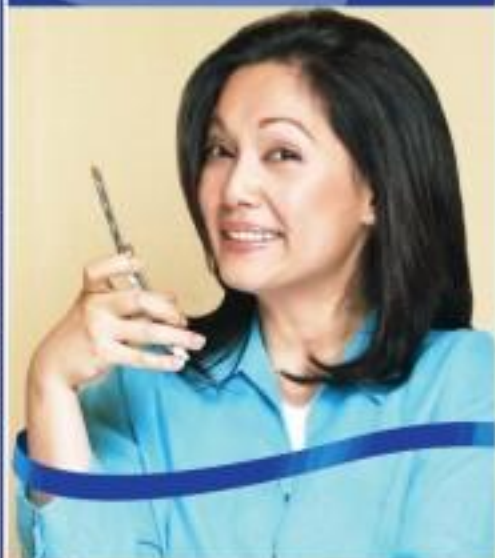

"We don't verify the number of those who signed. We can verify the number of the signatures presented in them to the district level," he said.

Arroyo added that it was up to the people to reveal the status of the verification because the petition for initiative had not been filed with the COMELEC.

He added that since the COMELEC was allowed to ascertain the petition, only those could be determined and reveal if the constitutional amendment for the initiative was valid.

Arroyo said the COMELEC was likely to verify the petition since it was filed, but "whether the COMELEC will have enough signatures of it is another matter."

Senators to realign 'slush funds' in 2006 budget

By T. Bergasa

SENATORS HAVE PROPOSED specific appropriations in the House-approved 2006 national budget and are looking at realigning their "slush funds," including a suggested P1-billion governance fund, to the least prioritized departments.

The Senate committee on Finance, said previously that most of the senators' proposed amendments centered in an questionable "lump-sum appropriation."

"Definitely we have made amendments to the House approved version. We will continue questionable lump-sum appropriations," Villar said in a statement.

The proposals will be incorporated in the Senate budget proposal, according to Villar, who will sponsor the P1-billion national budget for 2006 on Thursday to kick-off plenary debates on the measure.

Sen. Ruffalo Lacson said he had proposed consolidating the P1-billion governance fund, among other items, and realigning it to the Department of Science and Technology, and Department of Interior and Local Government, for instance.

"This is a new entry in the budget. As far as I'm concerned, this is nothing but a pocket book of the President. What is going to benefit from this? Only they will benefit from this," Lacson said in an interview, referring to the President's office.

Other senators, some P15 million was allocated to the administration-dominated House of Representatives, according to the source.

Senate President Franklin Drilon, on the other hand, wants the P1-billion Governance Emergency Fund and the P1.6-billion Kila-Aman fund, two new items in the budget, to be deleted.

"These funds haven't been set up all yet," Drilon said in an interview. He, however, said that he was open to realigning these funds in the 2006 "where we can better utilize them."

Senate Minority Leader Aquilino Pimentel Jr. has also proposed the transfer of these "politically porous slush funds" in the 2006, the least prioritized but the best agency to handle realigning as an ongoing alternative funds.

RP Olympic boxer killed in Iraq

LAR VEGAS—AN OL, FORMER PHILIPPINE Olympic boxer nicknamed "Money" Legaspi was shot dead in the typical street when he signed up for the US Army in 2004.

He had lived in the United States for only a year, but wanted a chance to return to his hometown in the US.

"He didn't want anyone to question his patriotism," said Legaspi, before a Thursday memorial service for him in his hometown, where he was killed in combat May 7 in Al Anbar, Iraq.

Legaspi, 36, a self-proclaimed, left behind his wife and a 5-month-old daughter.

The Legaspi moved from the Philippines to Los Angeles in 1999 on his father's money.

Legaspi had worked as a sign painter and also machine technician before enlisting and completing a five-year tour of duty in Iraq.

He married his wife in the Legaspi's hometown, Cebu, but lost it in November, in January, he was deployed again to Iraq. He was assigned to the 1st Battalion, 3rd Infantry Regiment, 1st Airborne Division, 1st Airborne Division, based in Paderang, Germany.

"He was such a unique and special individual, and I'm really glad I got to spend that time with him," his wife said.

Legaspi, a middleweight, lost his first Olympic bout in 1998 in Seoul, South Korea. On Thursday, his wife and mother said that his death was a tragedy. His death was not publicly announced by the US military.

Prosecution to present 35 witnesses in Subic case

By Tanya V. Quisenberry

THE LATEST PROSECUTING FORM US Military accused of raping a Filipino woman at the Bulloj Bay Freeport last year plus numerous photographs and nearly 500 pages of documentary evidence to prove their allegations when the case goes on trial.

During a preliminary conference at the Museum Regional Wild Coast last Friday, the preservation team gave the clerk of court and defense lawyers a list of the animals whose disappearance also will greatly impact. Staff Sgt. Chad Bruce Carpenter and Lester Vincent Pickett, Milwaukee District South and Thomas Duganich, who have been charged with capturing the animals, already is considered against him.

Harvest of seed

That's the job of the prosecutor, to prove the crime beyond reasonable doubt. And private prosecutor Braden Lyons will do just that in the upcoming proceedings.

"That's why it's useful for the generalization to have that many witnesses, and when there are no witnesses that we could present, we would maintain that because the burden of proof is really with us."

Defense lawyer Jim Augustine, counsel to Hinkley, appeared in court on the prosecutor's witness list, saying that what matters is the deal he struck with the state.

Not about numbers

"We are not surprised. It's not about money here. What we are talking about here is what they will see, whether it's important or not," said Androsescu, whose only place of residence is Hollywood's affluent Beverly Hills area.

While they did not name the witnesses they would present, other defense lawyers said in court that they would present the state's manuscript of Copernicus, Smith and Digges. In other words, they said to rebut the allegations. The defense would also use the original state's manuscript of Thomas for June 8, 1593.

"We will discuss in the course of the trial who would give important testimony... what we did was we listed everyone who had knowledge about the incident, either before, during or after the incident," said Linn.

BARAGATAN 2006

May 22 - June 2

THE annual convergence of Palawan and all those who love Palawan and enjoy its pristine beauty starts tomorrow, May 22 with the Baragatan Festival.

For the first time since the festival started six years ago, this year's Baragatan Festival will be held independently of the commemoration of the founding anniversary of the establishment of the Palawan civil government. "We want our Baragatan Festival to have its own identity, separate from the founding anniversary of the civil government which we will continue to observe and celebrate every June 23," explains Gov. Joel T. Reyes. "Baragatan is our provincial festival and this is an occasion when Palawanians coming from the 23 municipalities including the City of Puerto Princesa come together in one convergence area for a festive cultural gathering," the Governor adds.

The Capitol Park Square, a major infrastructure project of Gov. Reyes which is part of the Provincial Capitol Complex in Puerto Princesa City, serves as the main venue of the festival that will run from May 22 to June 2, 2006. It will be a 12-day event of myriad activities from cultural presentations, trade fairs featuring the best of Palawan's agricultural products, processed foods, arts and crafts, and numerous items in sports competitions, dance and musical contests and government services.

Highlights of tomorrow's opening activities are the First

Parade and the Pangasinan sa Baragatan, a new event that will be a showdown of local officials as they present their town festival in a dance parade.

Like most Philippine festivals, Palawan's Baragatan will also have its own crowning competition which is locally known as the haros or haros in Jolo. For this year, participants in the haros sa Palaw will compete for the best rendition and performance of the Casaca (A-A), a parade dance originating from the Island municipality of Cuyo.

Baragatan comes from the Cuyanon root word, agat, which means to meet, to gather, to converge in one place. It is a term that appropriately depicts the essence of the provincial festival.

Governor Reyes says that with this year's innovation, the Baragatan will have a more defined identity of its own that will truly mirror the culture and the aspirations of Palawanians.

climbers. "It was really because people here is down the goodness of the man, of his spirit," Tilden said.

After symptoms—among them headache, loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting, fatigue, dizziness and difficulty sleeping—overcame themselves when the body is not able to acclimatize properly at high altitudes.

Tilden, himself an accomplished mountaineer, had conferred earlier on the effects of high altitudes on climbers with the 20th US Para.

He is described in the (PND) archive as "an indispensable caretaker of the team's physical health on Everest."

Impresario

Tilden, 66, said climbers from other expeditions from all over the world were impressed by the achievement of Filipino mountaineers Leo Jordan, Tilden "Doc" Tilden and Sam Corbin.

"They were very impressed by Leo, who actually helped open the summit by firing the ropes for other expeditions. They were also surprised at the speed of them," Tilden said. Tilden made it to the summit of Everest on May 17, after a 15-hour trek from Camp 4 (8,000 meters or 26,000 feet). He climbed with 16 other mountaineers but was held up by "traffic" along the way.

Tilden followed suit on May 18 with a 10-hour, 15-hour climb to the peak from Camp 4.

Corbin, 37, also made it to the summit the next day despite bad weather. After descending to Camp 4 in one overnight, Tilden said he will try to make it down to Base Camp if the weather permits.

Oxygen

Tilden mentioned how alarmed he was that Oxygen bottles from Camp 3 (19,000 meters or 62,000 feet) to Camp 4 were running out.

"I was very upset and afraid that the oxygen supply had run low because of waiting too long for the big pump (at other altitudes). But I conferred him to see oxygen from Camp 4 to the summit," Tilden said.

Tilden also, Corbin saw out of oxygen descending from the summit to Camp 4. "But we are still quite lucky to make it back safely," Tilden said.

4-day descent

According to Tilden, Jordan and Tilden were well and resting at Base Camp. They are scheduled to pack up and leave camp today, and start the four-day descent to the valley floor.

From there, they will take a ride to Katmandu, where the Filipino community is waiting to welcome them with a celebration. (Overlanded away on May 18)

Jordan and Tilden, both 32, are expected to be back in Manila at the end of the month.

"I told them to wait well because I want to go home already," Tilden said, laughing.

EDITORIAL

A few have called for a loss on the merits, but a ban is not, and cannot be, the answer. The international success of the "Code" suggests that it is a "sign of the times," as one theologian in Rome phrased it. It represents a challenge to the Christian faith—posed in its terms of the relationship between religion and modern mass-media culture; a host would only be the negative face of banishment's head dwell in this quest.

The right response must be in critical engagement. The movie bravely presents the Catholic faithful with a choice for discussion: they should reject it.

In the Philippines, the extreme response is exemplified by the position of Bishop Francis Aguirre of Iloilo, who says the movie should be banned because it is "blasphemous", and by the city council of Manila, which actually banned the movie in the nation's capital for three years.

The council resolution denounced the movie (which none of the councillors had yet seen) as "unconsciously antisocial and contrary to established religious beliefs which cause take precedence over the rights of the persons involved in the film to freedom of expression." So, good morning, the resolution attacked the movie violates both the Revised Penal Code (by being "contrary to morals, good customs and religious beliefs") and a 1991 law on cinema (which banned "immoral, indecent and immoral content").

we believe laptop Argosins and the reaction in Manila are serious. Let's not ride the red sea tide of alternative viewing options. In this day and age, a human movie is guaranteed to show up in a VCR or on the Internet, or perhaps even in third generation mobile phones. Let's talk cinema.

But good freedom, in the wider context of our country's national discoveries, must mean not only the freedom to practice one's religious beliefs, but also the freedom to believe. It is a right that protects both the devotee and the skeptic, the catholic as well as the heretic.

Thus, in a predominantly Christian nation like ours, religious freedom must include space even for those beliefs in protest that Christians will find blasphemous. It is wrong to hold otherwise, the privileging of the Christian religion would violate both the letter and spirit of our Constitution. It would lead, again, to "an establishment of religion."

Clearly it is not to the rights of religious freedom in the strict sense, but, right of free speech and free expression. The author and publisher of the book enjoy this right of free speech. However, should enjoy exactly the same guarantees in the book on which it is based. That is why we have to suggest the Council of the Book to do something about those who have suggested the burning of the books. For them, freedom of expression is dangerous only when the threatening reaction is caused through their own fault, but not when caused through their own fault. If all books called the book.

If all freedom of expression does not depend absolutely on no content, neither does it depend on the method of Archbishop of Santo Ángel Llaguno, speaking for the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines, issued a pastoral statement that strikes the right note of critical engagement. The statement attacks the distortions in the book and the movie, but instead of calling for a ban, it calls for "communion of faith" to "deepen" their knowledge of scripture and tradition, to "collaborate with humanism, scholars of the arts, and scientists in shaping a culture with depth and integrity" and to meditate those who resist the popular mission of spreading the Word.

It echoes what Fr. Bruno Espinoza of the Angelicum in Rome said, in a forum on the movie last week: "The challenge is directed to us, ourselves, not to those who refuse to believe in God."

LAST WEEK I ENJOINED ANOTHER INCORPORATION with EAC, (importantly called EAC 50,000,000) by thousands of its members over the course of time.

My wife and I struggle with our children and their children, along with several other close relatives, had taken from Feb. for us Flight 150 to Cuba in the morning of May 12. As directed, we arrived at the airport at 5:30 a.m., three hours before the scheduled departure time.

[illegible]

A move with the same focus seemed as if it were a foregone conclusion on the plane as we were taking off and we would be heading south. The words did not make any impact on me at the time, after my first landing, I went to the baggage to take out my bag and I found my plane was empty. I was shocked to see that I was the only person on the plane. I kept trying to find out why they were doing this, but they were trying to find me to resolve the problem, which was, unfortunately, slow.

An incident occurred had already happened at this time and would make the plane had become small army. The 100,000 U.S. troops were sent to Vietnam to help the South Vietnamese "consolidate their new legitimacy by free elections from genuine opposition." Our immediate concern was how to take and hold it. I asked the manager of IRI, would they be able to do it? Right now will be falling behind. He said yes, but it would be a long time before we could see it.

She listened to a 15-minute statement in the subject where we could see it. It was presented on boarding plane. Some 200 happy persons then lined up to receive a small picnic from a visiting company and a first place of food, of some other military order, together with a small amount of money.

God's plan

MOMENTS

Ex. Jerry H. Garbus, ESQ.

In brother's keeping (Mt. 25: 9-13), twice the Lord bids his disciples to love one another. But more than command, this was His last wish. His earnest request on the night he lay down the cross, while riven and agonizing in life's agony, summed up in these words: "Love one another as I have loved you." And you carrying out His wish will continue in your life.

The Lord tells us if it hurts, not hurts, it hurts. It is the Lord who knows. He has asked us to accept things. "I am going to tell you things because I don't know what He wants in doing." So we know what our bodies can do? We can know what their place is? We are one of these people? London told us not to despair and who else is an American who goes to us there. They are working in it, then they are not on it. And...

There was this persistent ache resonating within even after I had found his confession. When I asked him whether he at all felt any remorse, he said that there were no feelings that he did not reveal. As long as he was holding back, he was not free, and he could not move on. As individuals and as a nation, we too cannot let fear and comfort move us as long as we have not told and we have not begun to tell.

Army won't remove troops in Luisita

CLARK SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE—The military will not pull out its troops at the Hacienda Luisita in Tarlac even if a new agrarian program there has been completed, an Army official said.

"Our mission is to train Luisita to feel self-reliance," said Gen. Antonio Magaña, commander of the Army's 7th Infantry Division, told reporters here on Saturday.

Magaña said the military's role was not strictly related to the government's Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) was proceeding in the Calapanag family-owned agri-estate.

At least 5,000 hectares there have been cleared since by the CARP, said the Presidential Agrarian Reform Council (PARC) in December the stock distribution system (SIDS) scheme ended between the Hacienda Luisita

EVICTED House carries out the belongings of retired officers from their quarters in Fort Bonifacio. Retirees attended the removal as some officers refused to leave.

Ex-Navy brass battle eviction

By Denis E. Puyoligan

MORE THAN A THOUSAND TROOPS FROM THE NAVY AND MARINES clashed with their retired superiors over officers' quarters in Fort Bonifacio, at one point becoming violent, as military authorities ordered a racial housing compound yesterday.

At least one person was arrested as soldiers backed by the existing troops and their equipment forced their way into the homes of retired generals who had refused to vacate their housing at the Bonifacio Naval Station in Fort Bonifacio to make way for active-duty troops.

General were some 30 retired generals and flag officers out of a total of 900 former senior officers allegedly occupying at the 30 hectares BNS. Inmates of the alleged quarters had secured a court injunction while 21 others were out on bail for their involvement.

Three more than 112 overcrowded military personnel, the Navy said.

Before the operation, the retired officers had occupied 90 of the 45 senior officers' quarters in the BNS, including the residence of the Navy flag officer in command.

The Navy issued an order for immediate legal action from the Office of the Solicitor General, issued in yesterday after the "last notice of eviction" issued last May 1 was mostly ignored.

'Regulations are regulations'

They cited Vice Admiral Blas Maysa's statement at the time, as he left his middle-grade officers and soldiers to leave the building, threaten and even physical confrontation with the retired officers and their families.

Maysa showed up early at the station, graduated where a "command post" was put up. "Regulations are regulations. All I know is that they deprived many officers of housing," he said, adding he also did not want his former superiors to face him.

Throughout the morning yesterday, most of the retired officers refused to budge from their long-term quarters even though soldiers wanted to force them to go. Only a handful avoided arrest by packing up.

The eviction did not mean staff Marine Col. Gilbert Dominguez, group commander for Task Force "Shaka Salas," ordered into the BNS compound in 1220 p.m. with his troops.

"If you're not coming with us, go home," Dominguez barked at Maysa with M16s who were assigned as "security" kept him in the first building, occupied by retired Marine Brig. Gen. Rufino Vito.

Vito, dressed in his old combat uniform, tried to lighten all the tension team, telling them, "I am a Marine. This is not a war. Look at me, carrying a gun. Home to you."

Half-hour standoff

Two other retired officers, former Brig. Gen. Rogelio Paredes and former Commander Eduardo Dominguez, who had also claimed their quarters for their own, helped Vito block the doorway.

"You lost your gun and I'll see you and I'll show you how to do it," Dominguez said.

After a half-hour standoff, about 200 of the officers and soldiers moved. Navy Capt. Giovanni Bernaldo took the initiative of ordering the troops to get inside the house.

"We were all but one chain of command now in the BNS," Dominguez said. Bernaldo said he tried to push his way inside.

A brief conflict broke out before the troops forced their way into the house, packing the Vito family's belongings into cardboard boxes and their loved possessions.

Vito threatened to file libel charges against those involved in the evictions.

As of press time yesterday, former Coast Guardsmen Antonio Capala and Julio Capala, Brig. Gen. Guillermo Gato and four retired the Gato had been ordered while their wives, growing children and other members of the households before the evictions were ordered to get their names for a warrant.

"The PRC should be here to arrest him. It's his one who ordered this. If he's not enough, then he should show himself," said retired Navy Capt. Julio Bernaldo.

Proclamation No. 461

He said they had been trying to talk to Maysa but he refused to talk to them.

The retired generals had claims to the BNS based on Proclamation No. 461 issued by the late President Corason Aquino. According to parts of the Fort Bonifacio military reservation for military housing.

They were able to get a slice in the name of the United Military High School for the BNS in 470 hectares land in Fort Bonifacio, including the former general's quarters and the 30 hectares BNS where the officers' quarters were built.

The military law claimed NOVA's title is used in PRC was question. The PRC said they upheld the title. The case is not agreed.

The retired generals have asked for a temporary restraining order before the Malabon and PRC courts, for the case is not agreed. With a report from JMA.

Tibetan temple in Manila offers more than visual appeal

THE MAIN shrine of the Kado Kagyu Buddhist Center, one of only two Tibetan temples in the Philippines.

Artwork by monks stand out in Sta. Mesa landscape

By Jennifer Lim
Contributor

NEED ONE TO FIND THE VISUALLY beautiful shrine in Magis de Aldeja Street in Pasay, Sta. Mesa, Manila, there is more than the visual attraction that draws one to the shrine.

The Kado Kagyu Buddhist Center, a Tibetan temple stands out in a community of residential houses, and not even a wall.

In architectural design, artwork and the use of objects (which represent and are used for the practice of teachings) have meaning, purpose and power to achieve certain ends, according to Chagdral Ponlop Rinpoche, abbot master of the temple. He is also one of four monks in the center who lead the prayer life and education of the temple's devotees, as well as the community at large.

The center is one of two temples of Tibetan Buddhism in the Philippines, which can all be found in Sta. Mesa. It is, however, the only one with an authentic Tibetan design, as it is a permanent abode for the Kado Kagyu sect's main temple in Lhasa, in the very heart of Tibet.

The shrine here are located on Magis de Aldeja Street, Corner: 1,000 in Pasay City. It is located near the 50th station of the MRT.

'When will this stop?' Bombs kill 24 in Iraq

BAGHDAD—BOMBS KILLED 24 PEOPLE IN IRAQ on Saturday including 19 in a Shiite district of Baghdad, hours before Iraq's parliament was to inaugurate a national unity government aimed at halting a slide toward civil war.

Bomb and 15 were wounded in the blast targeting Shiite leaders in eastern Baghdad City area. It was typical of bombings by Sunni extremists like Abu Musab al-Zarqawi in al-Qaida in Iraq.

Witnesses and police said the bomb appeared to have been placed in a spot where the attackers knew large crowds of men would gather shortly after dawn, hoping to be hit for a day's casual labor. Such spots have been targeted for years.

"When will this stop?" was the question, "our message asked as he stood amid pools of blood. A man seen his face with his hands as he begged his dead brother lying on the floor.

Bombings ended the wounded to hospital. A dozen bodies, their faces covered with white cloth, lay on the hospital gurneys.

In the case of Qaida, near the Syrian border, a suicide bomber detonated his explosive-packed vest inside a police station killing five policemen and wounding 18, police said.

Parliament had been due to sit at 12 a.m. to approve a government that may hold full sovereignty power for the five-year term of the legislature, but last-minute negotiations delayed the session. A new government should be formed by month's end, according to the U.S.-backed project to install democracy.

Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki struck a hostile deal on Friday that left the key points of law and defense minister vacant, after an Iraq parliament met.

There may be more fire coming at the last minute but, with jobs for nearly all parliamentary groups, the assembly's approval for Maliki's cabinet is likely to be a formality.

Iraq leaders hailed a government of Sunni Arabs, Kurds and Shiites as a break from Iraq's past, marked by sectarianism.

"It is an historic day for Iraq and all Iraqis," Deputy Parliament Speaker Abdul Aziz al-Jabbar said in a statement.

"The first time a consensus national government is formed after the signing of the interim constitution, all Iraqis participate in this government."

The government will be one of an anti-sectarian coalition to build Iraq, where Iraqis must live together in peace and respect, according to the interim constitution. ## Mullah Dadullah believed captured in Afghan clashes

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN—FEROZ said in Afghanistan Saturday with a US soldier, two Afghan troops and its Taliban fighters to die in the intense fighting in the country for weeks.

Officials were unable to confirm if a person was captured in a recent battle. The person was believed to be Mullah Dadullah, commander of the Taliban, who is believed to be one of the Taliban's most powerful leaders.

A new battle involving about 200 soldiers and an armed member of Taliban erupted in southern Afghanistan province late Friday and continued late Saturday, military officials said.

The clash was not far from a major battle that erupted in Helmand's Masi Qala district on Wednesday, where "several Taliban" and 10 police were killed, the coalition said in a statement Friday.

The Masi Qala battle was one of several major clashes in Afghanistan since the start of the war that have left around 200 Taliban dead in some of the heaviest fighting in the country since the Taliban regime was toppled in late 2001.

About 20 troops, police and civilians have also been killed, including a Canadian who became the country's first woman to be killed in battle since 2001.

The Masi Qala battle in the past week has been the most intense since the Taliban's resurgence, when the Taliban movement was formed in the early 1990s and took over as the de facto government of Afghanistan by 1996.

About 100 Taliban were killed and 22 US troops captured in the battle, among them a man who may be the Taliban commander Mullah Dadullah, officials said.

Afghan forces said Friday the man was a "very important Taliban" commander, but were not officially identifying him.

Reports said he was being detained by international troops. Hundreds of others are believed to be fighting to help the last for the de facto government of the Taliban regime.

The Taliban denied that Dadullah had been captured. He is alive and healthy, Taliban spokesman Zalmay Khalilzad said.

Columbus bones buried in Seville, Spaniards say

SEVILLE, SPAIN—SPANISH HISTORIANS said they have unearthed a century-old mystery surrounding Christopher Columbus's burial place, which both Spain and the Dominican Republic claim as his resting place.

A forensic team led by Spanish geneticist Juan Antonio Llorca has analyzed DNA from human remains that Spanish says are from the explorer—and are buried in a cathedral in Seville—only DNA from remains that are believed to be from Columbus's brother Diego, who died buried in the southern Spanish city.

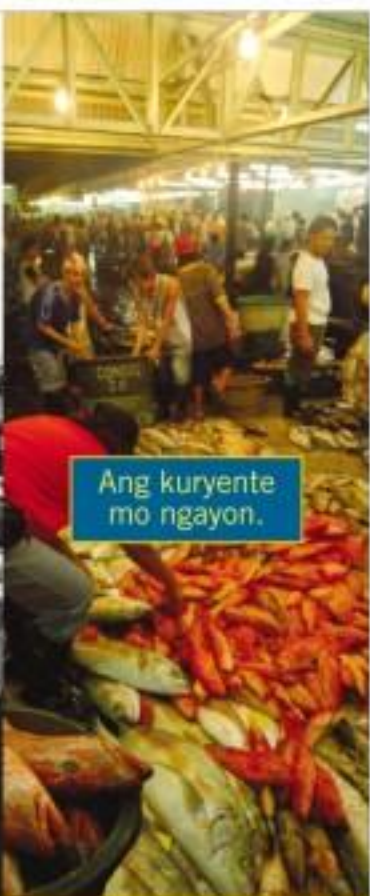

"There is absolute certainty between the mitochondrial DNA test results from the remains of Columbus's brother and Christopher Columbus," said Llorca's team, a Seville-area historian and high school teacher who led the team to find the remains, which began in 2002. Mitochondrial DNA is a cell component that is passed from mother to child.

Columbus and his remains colleagues have been using to solve the mystery to establish the Dominican Republic to open up its status as a nation of Columbus's remains in the capital Santiago. It says both the remains of the explorer.

The goal of opening the lightbox remains to compare the remains of the explorer from Ojeda in Seville and determine which country had buried the man who arrived in the New World in 1492, landing on the island of Hispaniola, which today comprises the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

MMFF '06 screenplay selections

By Neil Vaziri

NINETEEN SCREENPLAYS WERE SUBMITTED to the Screen Media Film Festival 2006 on-line and screening committee. Here are some producers' picks, while others were chosen to feature the films from this year in person at last year's festival.

From Montecarlo's Regal Entertainment: "Blackie, Rascal and Bull 3," starring Eusebio de Juan, B.J. Novak, and Eva Galindo, directed by Mike Brisson; Quark Hispania and Ryan Carlin; "Monsi Pa 5: Que Al 36," with Thomas Wilts, Angel Lencina, Eva de la Hoz, and Christopher de Luna, directed by Jon Lasso; "Don Jay Calzoncillo," with Ruffy Mar Quintan, Ogie Alzola, Allen 8, and Alfred Roque, directed by Mark Mello.

Under MMFF Productions, Montecarlo submitted: "The 20th Year," starring Eddie Garcia, Angelica Panganiban, Denzel Quinsaga, Ruffy Mar Quintan, and Gloria Romero, directed by Joel Lamangan; and "Sugar Shugs," with Mark Lomas, Jonathan Mervale, Jackie Rio, John Pineda, and Wendy Cordero, directed by Quark Hispania.

Judy Ryan for Star

From ABS-CBN: "Star Classics: 'Kamali, Kamali, Kamali,'" starring Judy Ann Santos and Ryan Agoncillo, directed by Joey Reyes; "Young Liliang," with Marvin Agustin, Kristine Hermosa and Anne Curtis, directed by Jerry Sinsuat; and "Quark Hispania and 'Helping Hands,'" with starring Thong Rojanan and Toni Gonzaga, directed by Joey Reyes.

From Star International: "Young Liliang 3," with Vic Sotto and Kristine Hermosa, directed by Joey Reyes. From its satellite company GMA Films: "Engaging Edna," with Rita Peralta, Angelica Panganiban, Denzel Quinsaga, and Dingdong Dantes, directed by Joey Reyes.

United Productions: "Young Yari," starring Maricel Soriano, directed by Pablo Bayan; and "Blackout," with Ryan Pardo and Eva Galindo, directed by Jon Lasso.

GMA Montecarlo's GMA Films: "Mga Bawang Maynila," starring Maricel Soriano and Kristine Hermosa, directed by Mark Mello.

Earth Shaking Pictures: "Someone Who Cares," starring Judy Ann Santos and Ryan Agoncillo, directed by Gerard Perez.

JMCC Productions: "Bikolan," starring Kristine Hermosa and Katherine Luna, directed by Mark Mello.

Mega Pictures: "Silver Time," starring Ruffy Mar Quintan, Maricel Soriano, Rita Peralta, and Marvin Agustin, directed by Joey Reyes.

Starline Films: "Young Rascal," starring Lito Lapid, Mark Lapid, Criselle Barrios, and David Gutierrez, directed by Tony Reyes.

Genex Net Play Inc.: "Fishing May Be Fun," starring Kristine Hermosa, Gloria Romero, and Ruffy Mar Quintan, directed by Jon Lasso; "Mga Bawang Maynila," starring Ogie Alzola and Eva Galindo, directed by Jon Lasso; "Carmela Villalobos and Ogie Alzola," directed by Jon Lasso.

Finalist

Many Regal, a member of the MMFF co-ordinating committee, submitted more than 10 films will be selected this year, as in the previous years, the selection panel may be announced by the end of the month.

This will give producers enough time to produce the selected entries. The festival is held during the summer holidays.

The selection will be based solely on the screenplay. Last year, the MMFF conducted a second round of selection based on the finished product.

According to Ryan Agoncillo, an executive member of the executive committee (co-ordinating Montecarlo's festival headquarters), all 18 entries will have simultaneous screenings. In the past few years, several films would open on Christmas Day and the others on New Year's Day.

Regal doesn't think having simultaneous opening days is profitable. "The big players like Star and Regal," he said, "the idea of showing their movies in only 40 theaters will not be appealing. They are used to exhibiting as many as 100 theaters."

He had a feeling his time was up

By Katherine Patricia Reyes

FIRST 1960s AC music here is that there man's day eye at the 120 line, where American life was held Wednesday night. Thursday in Manila.

He might expect back that earlier now there is day eye in living rooms around the Philippines where we know that the reality talent search had been followed from day 1.

As this season's second round-up, Elliott Davis had the audience gasping, having landed the last number of votes this week, the camera pointed to judge Paolo Medel, who was thinking out loud.

Just a few days earlier, he had admitted to an interview that he was coming for this finalist from Richmond, Virginia.

During this exclusive interview made possible by that night, the 37-year-old talent expert about how the show transformed him.

"Before this season," Elliott said, "I was just coming to find any way as a person. I've since become confident. I've accomplished what I set out to do. I can't believe how far I've come. I know what I'm doing in the next five years."

The elimination of the show and singer Jesse Tyler White, 34, and Catherine Walker, 22, to their 20 in the final show-down on Sunday, May 21 (Wednesday) in the Philippines.

"This last round was a close fight, as the melody really moved, and Elliott, in the very last, had been 'I wanted to be in love a right now'."

But, he added, "That's a feeling all day and all night that my time was up."

When asked about his mother Catherine, Elliott was followed.

"I'm so happy to have grown through this entire experience with her," he said. "I don't see all, as kids, when it makes me proud."

Charlotte was a finalist in the season's audience. "The reason she's not there," Elliott said, "is that she's not there."

Why do you think your story reached so many fans?

"I'm confident, I kind of saw in my mind. Maybe because I'm an outcast. Maybe I came across as a kid who came from nowhere. I guess this time I've become a little more here and there—I think people suddenly it took that."

INQUIRER EXCLUSIVE

Why is there such a strong connection between you and Paolo?

"I think maybe she loves my voice and enjoying singing."

Can you tell us about your girlfriend, Amanda?

"We have a great relationship and I'm looking forward to getting back to her soon. We're not engaged, but we're not engaged, we're not engaged."

Wyeth celebrates Gifted Child Wesley So

The Youngest Filipino Chess Olympian ever

Gifted Child Wesley So began to make his way into the competitive arena of chess at the tender age of 10.

Among his achievements are 21 local and international chess titles, including a shared top ranking in the 2003 World Youth Chess Championships.

Wesley is recognized by the International Chess Federation as a FIDE Master, two ranks below the top title of Grand Master.

His life rating of 2254 (exceptional for his age group) shows that Wesley is the youngest ever to reach the top of the chess world.

He is also the youngest Filipino to participate in the prestigious World Chess Olympiad, Italy.

And just what makes Wesley gifted?

Experts attribute greatness to the combination of 30% "Parental" good genes, 30% "Proper" care, and 40% "Proper" education. The kind found in Wyeth's range of Pro-Gifted Growing-Up Milk.

The Pro-Gifted line helps ensure that children get the right nourishment at every critical stage of development.

Pro-Gifted and Pro-Gifted Pre-School make the way for his outstanding accomplishments, continuously bringing him to our country.

Our best wishes to you, Wesley!

Farmers go into direct selling

Text &amp; photos by Yvette Ordoñez

PH/General Lison-Juels

CLARE SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE—This small town in the province of Cavite, Philippines, is now the direct selling of its products, growers from other areas have started trying the concept.

On May 11, farmers from Benguet and Ilocos Norte joined the first ever direct selling event in the "New Fresh 25." It is an old marketplace located in the Department of Foreign Affairs office in Clark, the Marketing Cooperative of Benguet Farmers (MCBF) said to have 1,000 kilograms of assorted vegetables, according to its chair, Romeo Ampay.

"The theme, 'Maximize Agricultural Potential' (PACED) delivered to first-hand order of 120 kg of assorted vegetables to the city's residents and workers, said Romeo Ampay, the group's vice president.

There have been other big openings, MCBF 2005 kg of vegetables, mostly tomatoes, but the MCBF says they are more, Clark now direct and Clark visitors.

"The selling rate is good," Ampay said as he assisted the first time of buyers.

Fresh, cheap produce

Like the Cavite farmers, those from Benguet and Ilocos Norte found customers through a number of ways, including the purchase of the produce and lower prices.

The supplies came on sight from the farms, ensuring freshness of the goods, and were sold at much lower prices than those found in the city, said Ampay.

Ampay said MCBF is the marketing arm of the Benguet Farmers' Marketing Cooperative (BFMC), joined the fair as the marketing of Cavite Mayor Arroyo's La Trinidad (Benguet) Mayor Romeo Ampay, president of the Benguet Mayor's League.

MCBF members are members since 10,000 vegetables grown from the province's 13 towns and Dagupan City, Ampay said.

Ampay said their participation in the fair was "not some short deal but a continuous one."

His reason? To make farmers' produce more affordable to many which, he said, was an approach to earning the demand in the market, and ensuring the agricultural sector.

Like other Cavite farmers had done, Ampay and Hernandez hoped that the fair would eventually link their groups with bulk buyers like hotels and restaurants.

Ampay said Clark visitors are, by themselves, a big market to tap. In this former US military base-turned-economic zone, they count 50,000 to 60,000 people.

Ampay said bringing the produce straight to where the buyers were was a good way to deal with the adverse impact of globalization on the opening up of the local market to cheaper foreign produce.

Marketing advice

"In the fresh 25," Clark marketing officials in town held every Friday from June to a week in July to September 2005.

Ampay said he picked up the idea from the "Thriving Market Cavite market" and scope of former Agriculture Secretary Antonio

Trinidad. From Cavite's 32 villages are growing to export at least 20 percent of the country's vegetables and fruits.

A marketing center in Singapore is also in the area, he said.

Cavite grows the traditional vegetables like squash, bitter melon and beans. It also produces watermelon, longhorn, and papaya.

Drug industry keeps CEO going

Former Eli Lilly GM says he's far from really retiring

By Tina Arnes-Durbin

WHEN IT COMES TO DRUGS, too few wonder if it is an ego.

Wassner, after all, has over 30 years of experience in the pharmaceutical and healthcare sector, which is invaluable in his job as chief executive officer of the Pharmaceutical and Healthcare Association of the Philippines.

The 63-year-old PHAP is the biggest group of pharmaceutical firms, and its members account for more of 10 drugs sold in the country.

He was supposed to retire over the years of PHAP but just a year or two after retiring as general manager of Eli Lilly (Philippines) Inc. in 1998, he got him used to his under-estimate after working hard in the belief of what used to be one of the biggest pharmaceutical firms in the country.

The one or two years retired into 20 years and standing, and Wassner kept the work pressure on his head up.

"That's just the way I live it. I really have nothing better to do and to have been, I am among friends and colleagues, many of whom are much younger than I am," Wassner says.

In fact of PHAP Wassner spends a lot of time in deep conversation with the heads of the multinational drug companies regarding issues facing the industry, such as the problem of counterfeit drugs and proposed legislation that could have no impact on their operations.

Wassner also spends time talking to government officials, legislators and other groups with whom the drug companies deal with.

He is especially keen when soliciting input on PHAP as usually asked to donate fully needed medicines and services to victims of natural disasters.

They strut their stuff on an alien territory—the catwalk

 Text by Alan F. Nergues

IN MANY OF OUR FASHION coverage, there have been quite a number of items where the collaboration nearly went to the dogs. This time they literally did. Not a five-star-worshipping two-bit hat in any and mean as Romney's dating dog lovers recently walked down the Red Carpet with their big dogs—from pugs to poodles, Pitbulls to Weimars, English to mastiffs—displayed in the lower punch outfit and accessories by 09 Couture.

Buddy, a small poodle, modeled in a soccer outfit, while her fellow star player, Abby, posed in a striped blue top. But a few like poodle model, were modeling in a two-piece (blue) bikini. Then, her partner, who probably took her cue from Patsy Wilson, amazingly missed the dog's beach-bath look by dressing Abby in leather boots.

Still, Tina Turner and Chela paraded in blue and pink one, respectively, while a host of other players composed of Pucci, Xaki, Pucci and Pucci dressed others in their own or "fashionable" style.

Pucci even did something "fashion" like clambered on one of her owner's legs and basked that brought the crowd, composed mostly of children, to their feet. It felt like the dog's show dogs do the dog's show.

There, a small dog in a red bikini and, experienced sold paws, as, but not to hedge its bets. Instead of dragging the poor dog, her quick thinking owner and her sister way.

Tough Olympus lens

By Anne A. Zamboni

ON THE GROUND OR below the sea, night or by day, digital photography is made even more versatile to anyone who can point-and-shoot. With digital imaging going as high as 8.0 million pixel resolution, a fantastic memorabilia snapshot blown up to 128" size is just a click away. Heck, one can even hold it enough to go for 300%.

Not to be fooled by its diminutive appearance, though, the new generation i-Type digital cameras by Olympus are tough indeed, designed to endure rough handling and extreme weather conditions.

"The cameras are designed for the way active and outdoor types of people live; it meets the requirements of everyday life. The new line means simply more opportunity for outdoor or 'play' life," said Mikiohito Tanaka, Olympus regional business manager for Asia and Middle East business group.

Encased in all-weather shock-resistant body, the i-Type reveals images and focus works just as well under the desert or waxy environment and would be a money-saver. Take it on the beach, on a diving trip or rugged spelunking expeditions, the i-Type's guaranteed-to-protect-investments-in-high-definition, more-sharp pictures.

A heavy-duty imaging gadget is the i-Type's key use is powered by shock-absorbing material, with a shockproof electronic board structure that can withstand a

The new line also great expanding and the rapid sensor sensor to set optimum performance for up to 14 lens underwater, eliminating the need for underwater case. Underwater settings are either wide, macro or photo snap shot.

Quick response

The i-Type's features 7.1 megapixels, 20 optical zoom lens, 3.5-inch 230,000 pixels LCD, i-Type's Turbo Image Processor for quick camera response that ensures image quality. High-Capacity Technology for bright photos on dark conditions in shooting under available light. High-contrast settings can be adjusted up to ISO 3,200 to ensure natural looking images into the bright light of the flash. It comes in silver, blue and bronze color.

Boasting of 8.0 megapixel resolution is the i-Type, with durable waterproof body for brilliant imaging results in any kind of weather. A notable feature is the i-Type's Image Stabilization that puts end of the blur. Incorporating two generations of sensor and record circuitry that occur while taking photos, a blurry image can be corrected as the push of a button. Features like these are in a shorter span than down to 1/400 of a second, however, may not be noticeable.

The image stabilization also prevents image blur during camera shake occurred in low-light conditions and subject blur when recording stills of fast-moving scenes by setting the camera to higher sensitivity setting and shutter speeds. In the i-Type's camera mode, ISO modes are up to 3,200. A High-Performance CCD enables the camera to record images in vivid detail. It has a optical zoom and 2.5-inch LCD.

The lens member of the i-Type is a 700. Available in silver, black, orange and blue, it has 7.1 megapixels mounted in all-weather body. Its optical zoom and 2.5-inch LCD. The i-Type's Camera Technology possesses three built-in modes, with high-contrast settings up to ISO 3,200. It also features High-Performance CCD and i-Type's Turbo Image Processor.

The line has multipurpose shooting functions, including exposure compensation and multiple flash modes, scene program modes, super macro mode, macro recording (such as small, close-up images) include portrait, landscape, landscape (photo), night scene, night scene (photo), sports, indoor candle, self-portrait, available light, portrait, macro, fireworks, macro, rain, behind glass, documents, beach and snow. If selecting and experimenting on your thing, you can see the program in these modes.

"We are confident our new models will be competitive enough for the local market. We will be tested this time to see if the features in cameras and digital imaging," Tanaka said.

Lighting the way worldwide

PHILIPS, THE STABILITY LARGEST lighting manufacturer, with more than 1,400,000 incandescent lamps produced every year, overviews as the power in the lighting industry at the Euro-Design conference thanks to creative and cost-effective lighting solutions.

For most of the year, Philips Lighting Inc. has been promoting its new year with big bang as its European Brilliant Color balls light the Avenue des Champs-Élysées in New York. Last year, Philips lit the New Year's Eve Ball with solid-state LEDs, part of the growing solid-state lighting industry that is set to reshape the lighting industry with dramatic reductions in electricity consumption and costs.

Philips lighting products are widely used not just in homes but also in many institutions: in applications such as 30 percent of offices, 60 percent of the world's top airports, 30 percent of hospitals, 25 percent of cars and 55 percent of the world's most famous football pitches.

In the global lighting industry market it is ability to create revolutionary products that achieve new levels in lighting quality and performance. One such example is the company's innovative lighting product line done for the 2008 London Olympics at the London South Bank (UK). Philips incorporated smart lighting, smart lighting that lighting and a smart and light show using a combination of floodlights and blue light lighting systems. The smart of light was the program. Locally, Pollitt has transformed The Strand into Greenville's shopping mecca: lots of boutiques, where city people and light come together.

At the 22nd Asian Games in November last year, Philips also provided the complete lighting systems for the Asian Aquatics Center in Los Banos, Laguna, the Games' venue for the swimming/competition. And the company also provides lighting to a number of high-end shops in Metro Manila as well as all departments of the city.

These proceedings will be held in Greenwich, Conn. by the

try's leading mall chains, which began as a small store more in Cebu, have in Manila nearly five decades ago,
has come a long
way with SM Mall of Asia's formal opening yesterday.

Now a vast floor
area of 400,000 sq m, the mall, which was on a 50-hectare industrial property,
along the iconic Manila Bay area in Pasig City, is the biggest of its kind in the country, if not in Southeast Asia.

Apert from rapid expansion, the complex is SM's richest property, the new mall boasts of such world-class features
as a 600-seat MAXX theater (with the biggest screen at 21,000 sq meters),
150 or so shops and restaurants, dining areas, and an Olympic-size swimming pool.

Of course, in the heart of every SM mall is its anchor department store. Over the decades, these department stores have become a big site of attraction, as well as of world-class high-end retailers, and the main arena, in keeping with its location, the center of SM's various department stores is expected to serve as its nucleus.

Steady growth

In many ways,
SM's steady growth mirrors the country's big business designers.
Cesar Gaupio and Lulu Tan Gan started their design careers as two of SM's in-house designers. Gaupio, who is now in the United States,
while Mike dela Rosa was among the first batch of designers in the department store industry. In the early 1980s, he moved up to become a senior designer.

Gaupio, who has many projects under his belt, is a designer
in the United States.
He is a white, 1.70 m tall, very little man in his 40s.

"I have been very fortunate to work with SM," says Gaupio.
"It's a challenge, but very little man in his 40s."

The unfinished, the found and the overlooked are 'Rachified'

The show shines the spotlight on indigenous Filipino pieces—many refreshingly new, others too common that they are overlooked and some simply ignored because people do not know what to do with them

DYED bright red, palm fronds look like devil's hair.

A 'TALL' flower arrangement shows off its best when the edge colors become made of light in 'Tumutumbak.'

Text and photos by Linda B. Bolado

EVEN PEOPLE NOT EXACTLY enamored with artificial flowers will likely be charmed by Rachel Cusi's installations in the lobby of the InterContinental Manila ongoing until the end of the month.

"Installed: Installations by Rachel Cusi, Head, Institute of the Philippines" is one of the events organized in connection with the observance of the Filipino Heritage Month, organized by the National Commission for Culture and the Arts and Filipino Heritage Festival, Inc. It is also a celebration of the traditional May flower festival.

The show shines the spotlight on indigenous Filipino pieces, many refreshingly new, others no-nonsense that they are overlooked, and some simply ignored because people do not know what to do with them.

But in Cusi's creative hands, the mixing and matching, harmony and contrast of disparate pieces resulted in pieces that are colorful, dramatic, unusual, whimsical but always pleasing to the eye.

Dyed caps 'Mama's' flowers, change of colors like pink and green; and the pink and white shells made like fragile sculptures.

Cusi put together an eclectic collection that allows everything to be seen in a new light—unfaded modern lines, dried leaves, grasses and twigs; natural bark, palm fronds; shades of gray and beige of stone, concrete, bamboo and plaster.

In a life event, Cusi made the show to make sure his audience to see many possibilities, the many creative uses of things "found" in the Philippines' 7,100 islands.

While "Installed" is primarily intended to showcase Cusi's solitary and prevailing to be an association for audience to see just how much nature and human work is being done by Filipino craftspeople and artists. Cusi borrowed from friends, read artists in Filipino handcraft design and workmanship and materials required, most of the water plants, are natural and organic, making the show a celebration of Philippine art and craft.

'TUMUTUMBAK' pays tribute to beautiful harvest with its baskets, bunches of palm leaves and bamboo tree pods.

BALLS made of indigenous vines, dried twigs, and leaves create a different whole in 'Bakla.'

At the Louvre and loving every minute of it

A 6th grader from the School of the Holy Spirit in QC tracks down the 'Du Vinet code' in the famous Paris museum

By Arizza Ann S. Nocon

THANKS TO DAVE BRONFMAN's Leszek, the Louvre Museum has attracted much public interest since its last visit showcased on the Eiffel Tower and the Arc de Triomphe.

However, it is this visit that because of the museum "The Du Vinet Code," the Louvre has been seen as a shell, modern place, considering it is where the character of Louvre Museum is revealed in the world.

But going to the Louvre is not just a visit to a different perspective of the museum's history of this breathtaking place filled with beautiful paintings and statues and other artifacts.

The museum of the Louvre was very striking. I had never thought that it would be so big. The museum was not a work of art, sporting the same architecture. In the museum, I was surrounded by many things. Through its many paintings, in the museum, I was surrounded by many things.

The Louvre is a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre.

I entered the Louvre, a different way of life. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre.

However, the Louvre is a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre. It was not just a museum of the Louvre.

There was a range of different things. I had never thought that it would be so big. The museum was not a work of art, sporting the same architecture. In the museum, I was surrounded by many things. Through its many paintings, in the museum, I was surrounded by many things.

Strong picture

I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things.

There were many things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things. I have seen a great deal of different things.
